NIGHT DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON.

Letter of Missions Members in Senate.
Henderson. Mr. Woodward moves an investigation—disgraceful scene in the Senate Chamber of the House. Mr. Henderson in preparation. A scheme to retrieve the Federal Reserve Bank. Forney denounces Chase-Holden. Foreman a civil war—religious fanaticism.

(Special Dispatch to the Louisville Journal.)

WASHINGTON, May 15.

WHAT IS TO BE DONE?
The impeachment trial is still, of course, the all-absorbing question here, as it is everywhere. Nothing of a remarkable character, considering all things, has occurred in reference thereto since my last dispatch. Everything that radicalism could do has been done to drum up and prepare the necessary voting material to secure a verdict for conviction to-morrow, but the chances are that these efforts have fallen short of success, and that the question will again be postponed.

SENATOR HENDERSON AND THE MISSOURI MEMBERS.

The pressure that has been brought to bear upon Senator Henderson grew to such a point that he was forced to yield. He is made out of sterner stuff than that which deserts the right at the call of wrong. In the House this morning Mr. Woodward, of Pennsylvania, attempted to obtain a hearing for a resolution of inquiry touching the letter of the Missouri members addressed by him to Senator Henderson for Mr. Woodward. When this was refused, Mr. Woodward justly contended that such action on the part of the Missouri members—this attempt of theirs to control a judicial proceeding of the other house—was an insult to Congress and an outrage upon justice, which merited the severest censure. As might have been expected, the House refused its consent to Mr. Woodward. When this decision was rendered, Pile, of Missouri—one of the signers of the letter to Senator Henderson—placed his thumb upon his nose, and declared that he was not a member of the Missouri delegation. The President's friends could not but be gratified by this action.

THE PRESIDENT OVERSEEN.

Developments show that the extraordinary manipulation of Senators, in order to force a verdict, is a very awkward thing for the impeachers, and hence the managers have indefinitely postponed the further examination of the President. It should have been known from the start and would have been, had not the enemies of the President been frenzied with the course of the President's impeachment. It is a very awkward thing for the impeachers, and hence the managers have indefinitely postponed the further examination of the President.

NEW IMPROVEMENTS.

It is scarcely possible to think that the House would not be a more just and equitable body than the Senate. WHAT THE RADICALS WILL DO.

The acknowledged failure of the impeachment scheme inclines many conservative men to believe that the radicals will, near the close of the session, rush through such legislation as will cause a speedy expansion of the currency and a more equitable treatment of the Irish people in the House of Commons.
